

Bachelor Degree Program in Azerbaijani Language and Literature Education

As the name indicates, this program is based on issues and topics related to education and Azerbaijani language and literature, as well as interconnections among the three. The program encompasses study of Azerbaijani literature from the time of its emergence through the periods of its development in chronological order. This involves studying the lives and works of individual writers and poets from various periods, exploring their literary activities, analyzing the national and global issues they focused on, determining the literary influence of a given writer/poet on others, and systematically investigating their creative activities according to the historical periods in which they lived.

Central to the coursework is the study of students' selections of literary works and discussions about these works. The students are also offered a variety of elective courses.

The "World Literature" part of the program has been designed taking into account historical periods and geographical locations. Literature selections from Ancient and Medieval times, the Near East, the Far East, and Europe are studied, and beginning from the 19th century, works from European, American, Russian, Near Eastern, and Far Eastern literature are studied and analyzed in a comparative framework. The program also covers issues related to literary criticism.

The language section of the program mainly focuses on the extensive study of the grammatical structures of the modern Azerbaijani language. At the same time, linguistic matters, the history of the literary language, and teaching methods are covered on a comparative basis.

The program is based on professional knowledge and teaching skills with a diversity of teaching methods. Internships are a necessary part of the program, and students are given an opportunity for a practicum and internship at "Dunya" High School and/or other schools.
